

The Cowdray Lounge

The Club's Cowdray Room is named after Lord Cowdray, whose portrait hangs overlooking this peaceful and elegant room, blessed with views of Green Park.

On 31 October 1918 the first Lord Cowdray made a gift of £100,000 to provide a permanent building for the benefit of the Officers in the then newly formed Royal Air Force and by the middle of 1919 the buildings which make up the present Club were acquired.

The Piccadilly frontage was originally the Ladies Lyceum Club and was built in the 1800s, whilst the rear half, facing Old Park Lane, was stables.

Between 1919 and 1921 extensive reconstruction of the property took place, largely financed by Lord Cowdray who donated another £350,000, enabling the development of the Royal Air Force Club at 128 Piccadilly as we know it today.
